MONTGOMERY CO. ELECTS REPUBLICAN TO STATE SENATE

Theodore Lane Bean, Norristown Attorney, Receives Plurality of 16,094

MISS ELY DEFEATED

Winner Carries the County and Is Named To the Legislature

(By International News Service)

NORRISTOWN, Apr. 10.—True to its long standing tradition of Republicanism, Montgomery County today remained entrenched in the G. O. P. fold. Complete returns from the 182 election districts of the county this morning showed that the Republican candidate for State Senate was accorded a sizeable majority over the Democratic opponent in yesterday's special election.

A proportionate plurality was given the Republican nominee for State Representative.

Theodore Lane Bean, Norristown attorney, was chosen to occupy the Senate seat made vacant by the recent death of State Senator James S. Boyd. Edwin Winner, of Hathor, was elected to the House, where he will replace Clarence L. Ederer, resigned.

Bean was given a plurality of 16,094 over his Democratic adversary, Miss Gertrude Ely, of Bryn Mawr. The victorious candidate amassed 46,664 votes as against 30,570 for his feminine rival. In the race for Representative, Winner accumulated 25,057 against 15,873 for the Democratic nominee, Charles Wilson, of Abington, in 114 of the 125 polling places of the third legislative district.

Republican leaders here and elsewhere throughout the State were seeking to seize upon this victory as a portent of the rising public opposition to Governor George H. Earle and particularly his $203,000,000 tax program.

Democratic chieftains, however, belittled the significance of the Republican triumph, pointing to the historic circumstance that Montgomery County has retained its G. O. P. complexion through many a stormy political campaign.

HARRISBURG, April 10.—(INS)—Reputation of Gov. George H. Earle's $203,000,000 tax program was read into the Montgomery County election returns today by Republican State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor.

He declared that unless Governor Earle is "entirely blind to public sentiment," the smashing Republican victory in the special legislative elections compels the administration to scrap its tax program and summon Republican and Democratic leaders into conference to work out a substitute plan.

"The Governor asked the people for a vote on his tax program—and they gave it to him," Taylor asserted.

"The election is an overwhelming justification of the position of the Republicans in the Legislature and an utter repudiation of the Democratic administration's 22-point tax program."

Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence had no immediate comment to make on the returns.

Republicans on Capitol Hill were jubilant, Democrats silent over the result which, more than a vote in the Senate and House vacancies, was looked upon as a direct referendum on the administration's policies. Governor Earle himself led the Democratic campaign to urge support of his program.

Political observers termed the result as impressive primarily because Theodore Lane Bean's majority over Miss Gertrude Ely in the Senatorial contest was more than 5,000 higher than the majority of the late Senator James S. Boyd over her last November in Governor Earle's own home county.

EUROPE STRIDES TOWARD HISTORICAL DECISIONS

Men Who Are to Make Them Converge on Stresa Today from London

BRITISH ARE UNDECIDED

(Note: H. R. Knickerbocker, famous observer of world affairs, will head the staff of International News Service correspondents reporting the British-French-Italian conference at Stresa beginning tomorrow. Just before leaving London to accompany the British delegation to Italy, Knickerbocker cabled his preview of the situation facing the diplomats at Lake Maggiore.)

LONDON, Apr. 10.—(INS)—Europe strode towards historical decisions today as the men who are to make them converged on Stresa from London, Paris and Rome, by airplane, motorcar and railroad.

Twenty-six days after Hitler's denunciation of that treaty, which until now had held the Continent together like haywire around a ramshackle Ford, Europe's leaders have just reached the point of their first joint conference to decide what to do.

So undecided is the British Government that at the last minute Premier MacDonald's foreign minister, Sir John Simon decided not to take this morning's train, but to stay for an eleven-hour cabinet meeting, then fly this afternoon to Paris, overtaking the Stresa train.

The cabinet had already heard everything Simon told Parliament yesterday, but the precise way he put Germany's position—"an army of 550,000, air parity with Britain and France, the right to possess all types of arms, a navy 35 per cent the size of Britain's," and finally "colonies"—made another cabinet meeting seem necessary.

Stanley Baldwin, who is prime minister in everything but name, wanted to get in a last word to stiffen the British delegation.

The Daily Telegraph, which has superseded the Times as mouthpiece for the Government, expressed Britain's pained indignation.

Four Trucks Involved In Two Accidents During Night

Four trucks were involved in two accidents in lower Bucks County during last evening and early this morning.

At the bridge spanning the P. R. R. tracks at Tullytown, last evening, it is stated by state highway patrolmen from South Langhorne barracks that a truck of the Dugan Baking Company skidded and collided with a truck operated by Armand Capaldi, Philadelphia, for Lewis Levine. The driver of the Dugan truck was Claude Brady, 823 Beverly Road, Burlington, N. J. No one was injured.

On the super-highway east of Street Road early this morning, the truck operated by Daniel Brennan, Gloucester, N. J., for the Sterling Transportation Company, Inc., of Gloucester, is said to have struck the rear of a truck loaded with furniture, which it is stated was parked on the highway. The latter was in charge of Maurice Moskowitz, 486 Elton street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Neither driver was hurt. State highway patrolmen from South Langhorne investigated.

REICH HAS HUMAN TESTING LABORATORIES TO PICK BEST OFFICERS FOR GREAT ARMY; FARMER AND ARISTOCRAT ALIKE ARE CHOSEN FOR RANKS

Are "Put Through Loops" at Several "Human Testing Stations"—In About Three Days Military Psychologists by Scientific Process Lay Bare Every Vestige of Mental and Human Nature.

An International News Service correspondent was the first foreign writer permitted to see the "human testing stations" set up by the Reichswehr and Reichsmarine in picking cadets for future officer-ranks. Foreign officers have declared there is no system for sizing up men that can compare to the new German methods. This is the first of two exclusive articles.

BERLIN, Apr. 10.—(INS)—Imperial Germany picked army and navy cadets from aristocratic and wealthy ranks almost exclusively—the Third Reich is taking all qualified comers, rich or poor, aristocrat or farmer.

The first and essential condition is that the applicant for a service career—who must have at least a high school education—knows what he's in for and has set his heart on becoming an officer; secondly, that he is physically and mentally fairly well qualified for a crack at higher military life.

So they put him through the loops in any of the several "human testing stations," which means that in about three days military psychologists by an amazing and intricately scientific process lay bare every vestige of mental and human nature lurking within the lad.

"Know your man!" is the watchword of the Reichswehr and Reichsmarine alike and their guiding principle in selecting candidates for officer-ranks. Therefore an officer of the new generation in Germany cannot remain the private owner of any mental quirk or physical quality, for these are carefully noted in systematic records filed away in the Central Laboratory of Psychology of the Reichswehr Ministry in Berlin.

C., Apr. 10.—Legislative machinery authorizing four Pennsylvania waterway projects with their cost approximately $42,000,000, today had the approval of the House which passed the only Omnibus, River and Harbor bill to reach the floor since 1930. The measure which did not appropriate funds, marked the first step toward the construction of the controversial Beaver-Mahoning canal as a connecting link between Ohio River and Lake Erie. The bill authorized two Delaware River projects, one would increase the depth of the channel between Philadelphia and Trenton from 20 to 25 feet and the width to 300 feet, while the second would permit enlargement of the anchorage basin at Marcus Hook, Pa.

BRISTOL YOUTH TO PARTICIPATE IN A TREASURE SEARCH

Michael Ciansiosi Honored By Those Sponsoring Sea Expedition

LEAVES HERE TODAY

Search to Be Made for Sunken Spanish Galleon; Also Buried Gold

High adventure on the high seas!

Such was the urge which prompted Michael Ciansiosi, 323 Grand avenue, to write several weeks ago to the sponsors of a long ocean journey in search of buried treasure, and which finally resulted in the glorious news last week that his offer to accompany the expedition would be accepted.

Shortly after noon today the young man left Bristol, bound for New York, from which port he will leave on Friday or Saturday on the trip that will take him over thousands of miles of ocean waste in search of gold on a sunken ship, and also in search of gold and silver said to be buried on an obscure island in the Canary group off the coast of Africa.

The young man, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Ciansiosi, will pass his 22nd birthday on the water, and never in his life has he been on the sea.

When a few weeks ago he read an account and viewed pictures in one of the metropolitan newspapers, relative to the proposed journey of Harry A. Adams, Jr., Bethlehem, and his father, Lieutenant H. A. Adams, U. S. N., retired, young Ciansiosi was fired with a desire to participate in the thrilling trip. The elder Adams was the navigator for Admiral Byrd on his first Antarctic expedition, and has encircled the globe 14 times.

The Bristol youth wrote to the younger Adams telling of his wish to take part in the jaunt, but the reply from the world traveler, who is also an archaeologist, informed the Bristolian that such was impossible. Mr. Adams however asked that Ciansiosi reply, giving a sketch of his life, this to be kept on file in case the young man might be able to accompany the younger Adams on a later trip. But a telegram arrived last Wednesday asking Ciansiosi to appear in New York for an interview. His excitement knew no bounds, and he hurried to the metropolis to keep the appointment at the harbor. He was informed by the younger Adams that his letter had appealed, and that it was an unusual letter, being singled out of about 700 from that many young men who too had heard the call of adventure.

After a lengthy talk the one arranging the adventurous trip told the Grand avenue resident he would be glad to have him as a member of the party of nine to make the journey. There is in the group only one employed individual, the cook. The others are all friends of the Adams, who are lured by the unusual search. "We have a straight angle on the treasure," Ciansiosi says that Mr. Adams informed him. "And what is more it will be a big vacation. Come with us, and enjoy yourself to the full." The Bristolian plans to do just that, and what is more sees ahead an excellent opportunity to further his education through travel and experience.

The two-masted schooner, "The Pilgrim" has an auxiliary Diesel engine, and is 114 feet in length. It is well equipped, having a diving suit, and all necessary salvaging equipment.

The trip, it is expected, will take from four to six months. The first port of call will be in the Bermuda Islands, thence the party will set sail to the obscure island off the Canaries, then to the Madeira Islands, the West Indies, and to Spanish Honduras.

The story in connection with the treasure is that about 400 years ago a Spanish galleon was sunk in the Caribbean Sea on its return from South America. With it went $7,000,000 in gold to the bottom of the ocean. Then about 100 years ago another Spanish ship carrying 113 tons of coined money, gold and silver, estimated in value at about $2,000,000, is said to have gotten into the possession of the crew which mutinied. The captain was reported killed, and the crew and ship were later captured by pirates. The pirates, it is stated, buried the treasure on the small island off the Education always has taken into account that the child as he grows up must assume the responsibility of walking about among fellows on his own feet.

Now the theory is advanced on good authority that it is even more important to train a child with the thought in mind that a goodly part of his time he will be rolling around among his fellow human beings in a swift and powerful car.

Psychology takes account that a person's actions are affected by his estimate of his own powers. Naturally the child who feels that he is stronger and more capable than his fellows, would become a bully. Education is directed to control this tendency and make him a gentleman. The new education must take into account that at an early age the youngster probably will at times find his capacity mechanically augmented to control 100 horsepower and 60 to 90 miles an hour speed. For the first time a scientific study of these human tendencies has been made by an expert under auspices of a great university. Robbins B. Stoeckel, Yale research associate in highway transportation, is urging that character education of school children emphasize the moral responsibility in driving an automobile.

"About 15 per cent. of all motor operators," said Dr. Stoeckel recently, "are imperfect and must be made over. Their personalities must be changed. There never will be any great improvement in the motor vehicle accident situation unless specialized character education with highway safety in mind, is undertaken as part of the educational program in the schools."

Unquestionably general obedience to rules of motoring courtesy would do much to increase motoring safety.

SMALLER WHEAT CROP

A crop failure need not be an agricultural calamity. It may even prove a blessing, as seems to be the case with the winter wheat crop this year, which is the smallest in a number of years.

It is no exaggeration to call the winter wheat crop a failure yet the wheat growers are not complaining. They seem glad of it and the reason is not hard to find. Only a shortage of new wheat will reduce the surplus of old wheat and force prices up to a level where the grain can be produced at a fair profit.

Immediate prospects for agriculture are promising. Grain surpluses are nearer the vanishing point than they have been for several years.

Next winter ought to see the country restored to something like normalcy as far as agriculture is concerned. The farmer can now hire labor at wages within his reach. The deflation of farm values which began with the end of the war seems to have touched bottom and begun to rebound and more credit sources are open to the farmer now than for a number of years.

Industry, commerce and finance congratulate the farmer and themselves.

Coulney, a statistical expert and Glenn Thurber, newspaper reporter; Roger Duane, a specialty dancer, and Marjorie Clarken, Glenn's fiancée, are also guests. Mrs. Elderbank's husband, Charles, twenty years her senior, lives in Canada. Long ago he gave up trying to keep pace with his gay wife. Unknown to Violet, her handsome companion and secretary, Price Merriam, is in the employ of her husband. Because of his wife's penchant for wearing a fortune in jewels, Elderbank hired Merriam as her bodyguard and then arranged for Violet to meet him. At the party, Marjorie has a premonition of tragedy. She is suspicious of Cupples, the surly butler, whom she saw talking to a man hidden in a doorway across the street. She tells Glenn about it just as Violet appears looking for Merriam.

CHAPTER VII

As Violet left them Cupples the butler came in from the hall and spoke to her deferentially. She nodded, and Cupples made his way to the corner where the musicians were seated. The music stopped. Cupples went about switching off lights. Coulney was helping Price Merriam with a projector atop the piano by means of which a spotlight was trained on the front hall door. All other lights were extinguished.

In the hall upstairs there sounded a low rumble as of distant thunder. At first it scarcely was noticed amid the general chatter of high-pitched conversation. But its influence grew in the gloom. It descended like a pall upon the gathering, whose speech and laughter dwindled and ceased.

It was a pervasive, muffled monotone, a dirge in a minor key that persisted until it tortured the nerves of hearing. It was threatening, compelling, relentless, strangely depressing after a few minutes of it heard in gloom. A second projector turned on a floodlight of eerie violet. The faces and white garments of the guests were ghastly blurs against the tinted darkness. No one spoke. The drums came nearer in unchanging tempo, like the creeping advance of an unseen menace, a circle of enemies closing in the blackness. Somewhere the distant, shrill anachronism of a telephone bell split the bass moaning of the drums.

Cupples went out into the hall through the rear door, which he closed after him. Marjorie noticed that, for she and Glenn had taken a position near the door. Her hand sought Glenn's for a reassuring squeeze.

"Heavens, it's ghastly!" whispered Marjorie. "It's got my teeth chattering. I wish they'd get it over. What did he shut us in for?"

"That's the plan," replied Glenn. "Shh! Don't talk."

The prolonged period of drumming preparatory to the entrance of the drummers created superb atmosphere for the promised event. One felt the pulsing blackness. One thought of the Emperor Jones pursued through the night of the jungles. The orchestra intoned a muted lament in obbligato.

The drums boomed louder, closer. The sound grew deafening as six men, black, glistening, hideously painted of face, naked save for the accoutrements of Zulu warriors, emerged one by one into the beam that pierced the purple gloom at the door. The headgear they wore, huge horns protruding from their foreheads, made them look enormously tall. They marched about the room, belaboring their drums in fierce tumult.

Merriam changed a projector adjustment so that the double room was flooded with sickly green.

He left the machine. He paused at Violet Elderbank's side and whispered: "I'm going out to see if Duane is ready."

Cupples. "Where will I find her, sir?"

"In the rear, where the musicians are," said Merriam.

The Zulu drummers, having twice circled the dancing space, centered their gyrations now in the front room, for it was out of the broad mouth of the oversized Yule log fireplace here that Roger Duane was to emerge.

The drums maintained their throbbing uproar. The musicians in the rear were playing, pianissimo, The Song of the Jungle. Marjorie saw the butler approach Violet Elderbank, was aware that the latter left the room, followed by Cupples. Then it was that she discovered to her amazement that

The front hall door was closed now, and the guests were wondering where Roger Duane was to make his entrance.

Merriam trained a spot on the partly concealed office of the deep fireplace. Cupples the butler passed about with a tray of drinks, for many guests needed them now.

Timed by a mighty crescendo of the drums and a sudden flash of fire and smoke on the hearth, Roger Duane leaped from the fireplace. He grasped a huge leather shield and an assegai that were ready at hand for him, leaped into the center of the room and whirled into his savage dance.

His face was a ghastly painted mask, his huge high headdress con-

"Oh, Lawd! Oh, Lawd!" shrieked the negro maid. "It's Mis' Vi'let, it's Mis' Vi'let! She's dead, she's dead!"

Glenn Thurber was not at her side. She was holding somebody's hand, but it was Jimmy Kirkman's. He looked strangely jaundiced in the unreal light.

"Great Godfrey," squealed Marjorie. "What is it—voodoo magic? Where's Glenn?"

"He went out," giggled Jimmy. "Said he had to go next door for a minute. He pushed me into his place to see if you'd notice the difference. Scarcely any, is there?"

"You dogs! I'm all gooseflesh already. When is this crazy fool Zulu dancer going to show up, anyhow?"

"Oh, there's more of the drumming barrage before the attack. Does sort of get on your nerves, doesn't it?"

Price Merriam came back. He made his way to the piano to change the slide in the projector. But instead the room—the whole house, it seemed—was plunged into blackness. There were hysterical giggles, a shuffling of uneasy feet. The wail of the music and the deafening throb of the war drums, however, continued, a reassurance that all of it was on the program. Yet stout nerves trembled under the incessant, eerie assault upon the scene. The lights were out, it seemed, for many minutes.

Abruptly the room went blood-red.

The drums crashed and trembled, moaned, sighed, shuddered. Mumbo-mumbo, boom-boom-mumbo. Mumbo-mumbo, boom-boom-mumbo.

tained as its central motif a human skull. He danced barefoot, astonishing in speed and agility, with an eloquence of motion. He held his watchers too breathless for applause or comment. The drums boomed less loudly as a fiercer phase of the dance gave way to another of ominous augury.

Duane halted abruptly at the sound of a shriek—a series of shrieks, piercing and blood-curdling—from the hall outside. The drummers stopped, too, and the musicians.

Many who were present thought that this, like the frightening darkness recently preceding it, was a carefully planned feature of the dance. But it was far from that. The shrieks were repeated, varied now by moans and jabberings.

It was Douglas Coulney who sprang for the front hall door and jerked it open.

Prone on the floor in the hall lay the shuddering body of Elsie, Mrs. Elderbank's colored maid.

St. Gregory Valcour was kneeling over her, shouting. "What's the matter? Tell me! What's the matter?"

Glenn Thurber was just coming up the stairs from the hall below.

"Oh, Lawd! Oh, Lawd!" shrieked the negro maid. "It's Mis' Vi'let, it's Mis' Vi'let! Oh, Lawd! She's dead, she's dead, she's dead!"

His story was told to an Englishman admiral, but records were later lost, only to be found recently by Arthur Carpenter, an American archaeologist. This island, and the Spanish galleon sunk in the Caribbean are the objects of search.

"The Pilgrim" is only two years old, and ample quarters are to be found on it for the party who during the next few months will have one of the most unusual experiences of their lives. Again TERRAPLANE

Proves amazing economy—in nation-wide test

22.9 miles to the gallon of gas—in a full-sized, 88-horsepower sedan! That's the average mileage, shown by scores of reports from leading cities, of stock Terraplanes in nation-wide economy tests held just last month. And some of these cars went over 25 miles per gallon!

In everyday driving, of course, you don't expect the kind of gas mileage you can get under test conditions—but even in city traffic Terraplane is also the outstanding economy car. Thousands of sworn statements from actual owners prove it.

Ruggedness Saves in Upkeep, Too!

But these affidavits also show an even more important saving from Terraplane ruggedness. Hudson's way of building automobiles—with America's only bodies all of steel, the greater ruggedness of Terraplane chassis and higher quality of materials throughout—means longer life and lower upkeep cost.

What other car can pile proof of economy on more proof, as Terraplane does for you? Drive a Terraplane, soon. Compare other lowest price cars with it. Then decide.

What "BUILT BY HUDSON" Means

America's only bodies all of steel—even a roof of steel. Motors noted for their smoothness, balance and ability to develop more power than other motors of comparable size.

Lower Bucks Co. Circuit Will Open Season April 30

The Lower Bucks County Baseball League will open its 1935 season on Tuesday evening, April 30. This was definitely decided at a meeting of the circuit held last night in the home of Jack Wolvin, Edgely. At the present time five teams are entered into the loop. It was left in the hands of President Dave Landreth to try to get another club to fill in the opening.

On the opening night, the Hibernians will play Newportville on the Newportville diamond. The Edgely Braves, unbeaten Twilight League champions, will play the Bristol A. A. club on Leedom's field. The Hulmeville team will be idle, unless a sixth team enters the group.

The forfeit fees were posted by the clubs and the rules and regulations approved.

At the next meeting the managers will turn in as many players as they have signed. This meeting will be held in the Newportville Fire House.

The camp swimming project committee will be continued with William Burgess as Chairman; Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown; Edward W. Fell, Hollicong; A. R. Hendricks, Sellersville; and Henry Palmer, Langhorne.

Dr. A. J. Strathie discussed the merits and changes to be made in future County Council meetings while presenting the report of the educational committee. The committee has received a request from the Bucks County Fair Association of Quakertown to prepare exhibiting contests, and stage dramatizations for their 1935 Fair. The publicity for the 1935 financial campaign was partly approved, and suggestions were received as to how to most effectively tell the many features that will be a part of the 25th Anniversary of Scouting.
